Article 32 (Asset Valuation Principles)

1. The Investment Corporation shall carefully and faithfully conduct valuation of assets under management for unitholders.
2. The Investment Corporation shall endeavor to ensure the reliability of valuation when performing valuations of assets under management.
3. In principle, there shall be continuity in the valuation of assets under management.

Article 33 (Methods, Standards and Record Date of Valuation of Assets)

1. The Investment Corporation's methods and standards of asset valuation shall be specified as follows for each class of assets under management according to the Regulation on Accountings of Investment Corporations (Cabinet Office Order No. 47 of 2006, as amended), Rules on Real Estate Investment Trusts and Real Estate Investment Corporations established by the Investment Trusts Association, Japan (as amended, hereinafter referred to as the "Rules on Real Estate Investment Trusts and Real Estate Investment Corporations," other rules specified by the association, generally accepted accounting principles and other corporate accounting practices.
 - (1) Real property, rights of lease of real property and superficies rights (as provided for in Article 29, paragraph 1, item (1), (i) through (iii))

Valuation shall be performed using the amount obtained by deducting the cumulative amount of depreciation from the acquisition price. The method of calculation of the amount of depreciation shall be calculated by the straight-line method for the building portion and the equipment portion. However, in cases where calculation by the straight-line method is not appropriate, and only when it can be reasonably determined that there are no problems for the protection of

- unitholders, this may be changed to another calculation method.
- (2) Beneficial rights in trust entrusted with real property, rights of lease of real property or superficies rights (as provided for in Article 29, paragraph 1, item (1), (i) through (iv))
Valuation shall be performed according to (1) in this paragraph if the trust property is real property the right to lease real property or superficies, and according to generally accepted accounting principles and other corporate accounting practices if the trust property is financial assets or liabilities. Later, beneficial interests in trust shall be evaluated using the amount equivalent to the share of the beneficial interest in trust calculated by deducting the total amount of the trust's liabilities from the total amount of assets.
 - (3) Beneficial interests in trust for money for the purpose of being managed as investment in real property, rights of lease of real property or superficies rights (as provided for in Article 29, paragraph 1, item (1) (v))

 - (4) Equity interest in a silent partnership investing in real estate (as provided for in Article 29, paragraph 1, item (2) (i))
In the case the constituent assets of the equity interest in a silent partnership investing in real estate are assets listed in items (1) through (3), in principle, the valuation shall be performed using the amount obtained by deducting the cumulative amount of depreciation from the acquisition price. The method of calculation of the amount of depreciation shall be calculated by the straight-line method for the building portion and the equipment portion. However, in cases where calculation by the straight-line method is not appropriate, and only when it can be reasonably determined that there are no problems for the protection of unitholders, this may be changed to another calculation method. If the constituent assets of the equity interest in a silent partnership investing in real estate include financial assets, in principle, valuation shall be performed according to generally accepted accounting principles and other corporate accounting practices, and be the amount calculated as the amount equivalent to the share in the contribution to the silent partnership in real estate after deducting the amount of liabilities from the total of these amounts.
 - (5) Securities (those provided for in Article 29, paragraph 1, item (2) (ii) through (v), item (3) (iii) through (vii), (ix), (x), (xvii) and (xix))
Valuation shall be performed at acquisition cost if classified as bonds held to maturity, and valuation shall be performed at market value if classified as other securities. However, shares, etc, with no market price shall be evaluated at acquisition cost.
 - (6) Monetary claims (those provided for in Article 29, paragraph 1, item (3) (xiv))
Valuation shall be performed using the price obtained by deducting the allowance for doubtful accounts from the acquisition price. However, in cases where claims are acquired at a price higher or lower than the claim amount and the nature of the difference between the acquisition price and the claim amount is acknowledged to be an interest adjustment, the price shall be that for which the allowance for doubtful accounts has been deducted from the amount calculated based on the amortized cost method.
 - (7) Rights pertaining to derivative transactions (those provided for in Article 29, paragraph 1, item (3) (xviii))

- (i) Claims and liabilities arising from derivative transactions shall be evaluated at market value.
 - (ii) Notwithstanding the above, hedge accounting may be applied if the requirements for hedge accounting are satisfied according to the Accounting Standard for Financial Instruments and the Practical Guidelines for Accounting of Financial Instruments, and special treatment for interest swaps may be applied to transactions that satisfy the requirements for special treatment for interest swaps pursuant to the Accounting Standard for Financial Instruments and the Practical Guidelines for Accounting of Financial Instruments.
- (8) Other

If not provided for above, valuation shall be performed using the valuation to be made according to the valuation rules of the Investment Trusts Association, Japan or the valuation made according to generally accepted accounting principles and other corporate accounting practices. Furthermore, notwithstanding the above, if valuation should be performed according to the valuation rules of the Investment Trusts Association, Japan, or generally accepted accounting principles and other corporate accounting practices due to the actual economic condition of the assets under management, the valuation shall be performed using this valuation.
- 2. If the valuation is performed using a method differing from the preceding paragraph for the purpose of stating the price in asset investment reports, etc., the valuation shall be performed as follows.
 - (1) Real property, rights of lease of real property and superficies rights

- 1. Distribution policy

In principle, the Investment Corporation shall make distributions according to the following policy.

 - (1) Of the total amount of money to be distributed to unitholders, the amount of profit (meaning the amount calculated by deducting the total amount of investment from the amount of net assets on the balance sheet of the Investment Corporation; the same applies hereinafter) shall be calculated according to the Investment Trust Act, generally accepted accounting principles and other corporate accounting practices.

- (2) When making distributions up to the amount of profit, in principle, the amount of distributions shall be an amount determined by the Investment Corporation that is more than the amount equivalent to 90 percent of the amount of distributable profit (or the amount after the amendment if the calculation of the amount is amended due to a revision of laws and regulations, etc.) provided for in the tax exemption for Investment Corporations provided for in Article 67-15, paragraph (1) of the Act on Special Measures Concerning Taxation (Act No. 26 of 1957, as amended; hereinafter referred to as the "Act on Special Measures Concerning Taxation"). However, the Investment Corporation may accumulate, withhold or otherwise dispose of an amount required for accumulated funds for long-term repairs, payment reserves, distribution reserves and similar accumulated funds and reserves acknowledged to be required for maintaining assets or increasing value.
 - (3) The amount of profit that is withheld without being allocated to distributions shall be managed according to the scope and policy of asset management of the Investment Corporation.
2. Distributions of money exceeding profit
 The Investment Corporation may distribute money exceeding profit as a refund of investment to unitholders based on the financial statements pertaining to distribution of money approved pursuant to the Investment Trust Act if deemed to be appropriate by the Board of Directors based on the assumption that (i) the amount of capital expenditure required for maintaining and improving the competitiveness and value of assets held (hereinafter referred to as "necessary expenditure") is appropriately evaluated and the Investment Corporation has appropriately accumulated cash and deposits equal to or greater than the necessary expenditure and (ii) asset value of the Investment Corporation is being appropriately maintained at the time of implementation (a) in cases where the occurrence of taxation such as corporation tax can be reduced in the Investment Corporation or (b) based on trends such as the economic environment, the real estate market and the leasing market, the condition of assets held and financial condition, etc. If the Investment Corporation makes distributions of money exceeding profit, this shall be no more than the amount of profit for the fiscal period plus the amount specified by laws and regulations (including the rules of the Investment Trusts Association, Japan).
3. Method of distributions, etc.
 Distributions shall be made in cash, and, in principle, distributed to the unitholders or registered pledgees listed or recorded in the final unitholder registry for the fiscal period according to the number of investment units held or the number of investment units subject to registered pledge of investment units no later than three months after the fiscal period end.
4. Rules of the Investment Trusts Association, Japan
 In addition to paragraphs 1 through 3, the Investment Corporation shall comply with Rules on Real Estate Investment Trusts and Real Estate Investment Corporations along with other rules established by the Investment Trusts Association, Japan in the distribution of money.
5. Period of exclusion for the right to claim distributions
 The Investment Corporation may be exempt from its obligation to pay distributions when three years have elapsed since the date of the commencement of payment thereof without distributions of money being received pursuant to this article. Unpaid distributions shall not accrue interest.

Article 36 (Limits on Borrowings and Issuance of Bonds by the Investment Corporation, etc.)

1. The Investment Corporation may borrow funds (including through the call market) or issue investment corporation bonds (including short-term investment corporation bonds; the same applies hereinafter) for the purpose of acquiring assets, paying repair expenses or distributions, funds required for operation of the Investment Corporation or repayment of debts (including the refund of lease deposits and security deposits, and the repayment of investment corporation bond obligations) to contribute to the steady growth, efficient management and stability of management of assets under management. When borrowing funds, this shall be limited to borrowing from qualified institutional investors specified in Article 2, paragraph (3), item (i) of the Financial Instruments and Exchange Act (provided that these are limited to parties who are institutional investors prescribed in Article 67-15, paragraph (1), item (i)b.2) of the Act on Special Measures Concerning Taxation.
2. In the case of the preceding paragraph, the Investment Corporation may present assets under management as security.
3. The limit on the amount of loans and issuance of investment corporation bonds shall be 1 trillion yen each and the combined amount shall not exceed 1 trillion yen.
